TAFT'S BLOOD IS AROUSED ENTERS FIGHT

Declares Death Alone Can Keep Him Out of Race.

ROOSEVELT'S FRIENDS ACTIVE

Throw Off Mask and Admit That Colonel Is Aware of Moves Made in His Behalf and Has Agreed to Remain Passive Until Proper Psychological Moment Arrives — New England States Look Upon Hughes
as Available Presidential Timber.

Washington, Jan. 4.—"Nothing but death can keep me out of the fight now," remarked President Taft to friends with whom he was discussing his immediate future in presidential politics. He added that he had no objection to this statement being made public. The president, it may be said, was not goaded into making this statement. He was in good humor and was just as kindly and pleasant as usual, but he evidently felt that in view of recent rumors and statements, especially in view of Governor Osborn's suggestion that he should retire and not seek a renomination, the time had come when his exact position should be made known to the public.

Colonel Roosevelt's position was also made known by personal friends in this city, who declared that he is in the fight for the presidential nomination and added that they personally waited on Colonel Roosevelt several months ago for the purpose of ascertaining his wishes in the matter. They state that they then declared to Roosevelt that in their opinion Taft could not be re-elected if renominated. They went over the ground with Roosevelt, remarking that the president's reciprocity measure had been very injurious to the Republican party, especially among the farmers in the states from Maine to California, on the Canadian border.

Told to Go Ahead.

These friends of Colonel Roosevelt declared further that they left the president with assurances that they could go forward in their work of organization on his behalf; that he would not interfere with their work, but that they need not expect from him any positive declaration as to his own candidacy; that he would merely sit tight, using one of the ex-president's favorite expressions. So that it may now be stated that the Roosevelt movement hasn't been a haphazard one, without direction, without head or tail, but from the start has had formation and determined purpose, and moreover, that the ex-president has been fully familiar with what has been going on and that he acquiesced in it and sanctioned it.

Representative Calder returned from New York city and was in earnest conversation with a number of his Republican congressional brethren in the New York delegation.
Representative Calder has no hesitation in telling them that Colonel Roosevelt is a candidate for the Republican nomination for president, and added that certain business interests did not believe that President Taft could be elected.

Senator Lodge, one of the old-time
friends of Roosevelt, evidently is well aware of all that has been going on.
He fairly beamed on his colleagues.
At intervals he even chuckled, and that is saying a great deal for Senator Lodge.

Hughes Looms Up.

It is well known that certain influential Republicans from a number of states have visited Supreme Court Justice Hughes and discussed his availability. To all his visitors Justice Hughes has made but one answer, the one so well known to the public, that he could not and would not be a candidate while President Taft was a candidate. Furthermore, it is well known in this city that several states, Vermont, to be specific as to one which indicated that,
while it could not send a Taft delegation to the national convention nor a Roosevelt delegation, she could very easily send a Hughes delega-

THREE CENTS OR WALK SLOGAN

Toledo Citizens Adopt Slogan in Streetcar Fight.

Toledo, O., Jan. 4.—The Toledo Street Railroad company has not decided upon what course to pursue with reference to the 3-cent fare ordinance passed by council and which it is expected will receive Mayor Whitlock's signature today. It is hinted that service may be discontinued on the 14 lines on which the franchises have expired, which would practically stop all service in the city, or that certain stockholders may ask for the appointment of a receiver. In several office buildings walking clubs have been formed, the motto of the members being "Three Cents or Walk." It is proposed to organize a central club which will embrace organizations in wards and precincts throughout the city.

Denies Telling Gompers

Indianapolis, Jan. 4.—The fact that Detective William J. Burns is investigating the action of Former Mayor Charles A. Bookwalter in connection with the destruction of four buildings in this city with dynamite, brought out a story to the effect that Bookwalter told Samuel Gompers
soon after the explosions occurred that the iron workers were guilty of the outrages. Bookwalter did not deny, when the story was told to him, that he knew or suspected the iron workers of causing the local explosions, and he says that he told a number of labor leaders of his knowledge, but he did not speak to Gompers on the subject.

IN TABLOID FORM.

President Taft's fighting blood is aroused and he announces that he is in the fight to stay. Nothing but death can keep him out now.

historic figure in naval affairs.

Powell's Painting Which Was Mutilated In National Capitol

Photos by American Press Association.

A MYSTERIOUS piece of vandalism was recently perpetrated upon the large painting, "The Battle of Lake Erie," which is hung in the capitol at Washington. The picture, which is 35 by 25 feet, represents Commodore Perry in the midst of the battle leaving the disabled ship Lawrence to transfer his flag to the Niagara. It was painted by W. H.
Powell in 1865 by order of congress and cost $25,000. It has been one of the most popular works of art in the capitol, and public interest in it has increased since its mysterious mutilation. The cut in the canvas, which is shown in the lower photograph, was apparently made with the intention of cutting out the painter's signature. Opinion is divided as to whether the act was that of a discharged employee, a lunatic or of some one angered over the abrogation of the Russian treaty.

THIEVES GET AWAY WITH RICH BOOTY AMOUNT IS $10,000

League Planning Liability Laws

Columbus, O., Jan. 4.—A saloon-keepers' liability law, to act similar to the employers' liability act now in force in Ohio, is being prepared by the Anti-Saloon league, and will be presented to the next general assembly. The bill will provide that saloon-keepers pay adequate damages to men who are injured while intoxicated or to the family or heirs in case an intoxicated man is killed.

Two propositions are under consideration. One provides that saloon men as a body shall be taxed to provide a fund from which damages shall be paid, and the other that the individual saloonkeepers shall be held responsible and be made to pay the liability claims. It is probable that the former proposition will be used.

Rob Newark Jewelry Store In Sight of Pedestrians.

Newark, O., Jan. 4.—With a woman and little girl watching them as they worked, three burglars looted the jewelry store of F. J. Pratt of diamonds, watches and other valuables amounting to $10,000. The store is located in one of the main business sections of the city and the robbery was committed in view of passing crowds.

The yeggs gained entrance through a door at the rear of the store and went to the front window, which they stripped clear of its contents,
putting their loot into oil sacks.
Next they rifled showcases and drawers, securing many valuable articles.
As the burglars worked Mrs. J. W.
Weakly and little Miss Hazel Swann
stood in front of the window. Mrs.
Weakly believed the men to be attaches of the store who were putting the goods away for the night. The little girl declared she believed the men to be burglars and said they were working just as she had read about in burglar stories.

When it was determined to call a policeman and the officer had come,
the thieves escaped. They went east of this city and are being pursued by officers in an automobile.

sentatives Might Protect Themselves From Overshipments and Did Not Necessarily Mean That Meat
Had to Be Sold at Certain Price.
Made Defendants Grip Their Seats.

Chicago, Jan. 4.—W. D. Miles was the center of attraction at the trial of the 16 indicted meat packers, and when his name was called each of the defendants gripped his chair and hastily moved to the witness stand to hear what the packers' former manager was to unfold. Miles for years was general manager for the Armour Packing company at Kansas City. He has been proclaimed as the government's "star" witness. It is even hinted by the defendants' counsel that he for years has been a government investigator.

Until the moment Miles took the stand Attorney Pierce Butler of St.
Paul conducted the examination of the witnesses. Miles, however, he turned over to Assistant Attorney General James Sheehan.

Talked of Old Pool.

Mr. Sheehan lost no time in getting down to business. He tried to lead from the witness anything he might know about papers issued from the offices of the old pool when the witness was a member of it, and at times its chairman. Mr. Miles identified many papers as those sent to him through the pool. These related to shipments of meat made by the Armour Packing company in territory A or the northeastern part of the United States. He described margins, their inception, their intent and their figures. These margins, he said, were issued so that agents of the packers throughout the east could have some price whereby they could maintain a standard on returns.

SIGNAL FOR THE FAMOUS FIGHTER

Seized With Acute Indigestion
After Luncheon.

WAS IDOL OF AMERICAN NAVY

Believed That Dignity of United States Should Be Upheld at Any Cost and Was Noted For Brevity
and Virility of Messages Handed Out to Foreign Governments.
Wanted Job of Cleaning Up Spanish Navy With Single Battleship.

Washington, Jan. 4.—Following an illness of less than three hours, Rear Admiral Robley D. Evans, familiarly known to the American public as "Fighting Bob" Evans, died at his home in this city. The cause of his death was an attack of acute indigestion which came on after he had eaten his luncheon.

"Fighting Bob" Evans, to the country generally, was the hero of the new navy. It was his fortune to be on the spot in several seas when decisive action was necessary to uphold his country's dignity, and his method of standing up for the rights of Americans and the glory of the flag sent responsive thrills from the Atlantic to the Pacific. Evans was a commanding figure in big things, a history-maker, and although he was denied at the close of his long service the honor he wanted most—a vice admiralty—there was no doubt that he found some compensation in the enthusiastic regard of the people.

His last great service was piloting the battle fleet around the Horn and into the harbor of San Francisco, but 10 years previously, the ability and courage he displayed in the battle of Santiago bay, when his ship, the Iowa, played so splendid a part in the destruction of the Spanish fleet, placed Robley Dunsen Evans in the forefront of American sea fighters. In 1891, Admiral Evans, with only one gunboat to back him up in Valparaiso harbor, bristled up to the Chilean government and forced an apology for an attack on American marines. Americans weren't liked down there in those days. The Chileans overlooked few opportunities to annoy or covertly insult. A torpedo boat played around the Yorktown and insults were shouted from her deck. Boats were stolen from the American gunboat. Evans got red in the face and began to swear.
He sent word to the Chilean commander that if the torpedo boat as much as scratched paint from the Yorktown's white sides that he would blow it out of the water. Moreover, if another boat was stolen, hell would smell of garlic for a considerable time to come. Evans' dauntlessness electrified his countrymen. It was a great stroke for the new navy. The entire country was at once brought into a bond of sympathy with it.

Commanded Crack Cruiser.

In 1893 Evans was made a captain, and the following year was assigned to command the crack cruiser New York. The ill feeling between the United States and Spain was coming slowly to a head. Evans didn't approve of the government's policy.
He said frankly that the United States ought to show its sympathy for the Cuban insurgents. One day in 1896, when Cleveland was president and William G. McAdoo was assistant secretary of the navy, Captain Evans spoke pretty freely to them. He told the president that the battleship Indiana, which he commanded at the time, was the finest, fastest fighting machine afloat.

"If you will give me the word," he said, "I will go down to Cuba and with her alone will undertake to clean out the entire Spanish fleet."
When he left Mr. McAdoo's office, he remarked in an undertone: "If they'll only give me a chance in Cuba with my battleship, no lan-

Nation-wide Publicity Given to Washington C. H.

Every Leading Newspaper in America Contained Account of Fire, Many Greatly Exaggerating the Big Conflagration.

Every newspaper of importance in the United States contained more or less mention of the great conflagration which swept this city Saturday night, and tens of millions of people have read of the great calamity which swept down upon the city under cover of darkness, and Washington C. H. is better known in every nook and corner of the country than ever before.

In many of the newspapers outside of Ohio the account of the blaze was greatly exaggerated. In the eastern newspapers it was elaborated upon and distorted until the accounts indicated that the city had been wiped off the map.

The western papers carried an even more exaggerated account of the blaze, reporting the loss at over two millions of dollars, with the flames still spreading. Oklahoma newspapers had the loss fixed at $2,000,000.

with two or three lives sacrificed, and a half dozen big fire departments rendering assistance.

Early reports of the fire were sent out over the Postal wires, what Western Union wires were working, and the long distance telephone. The full extent of the damage could not be determined until one o'clock Monday morning, and even then it was not certain that the flames would be satisfied with the square to which it had thus far confined itself.

Washington C. H. was advertised as probably never before, but it cost the business interests of the city a cool $200,000 or better to do it, together with a like amount from the Insurance Companies. The sympathy of the reading American public, has been aroused for the stricken city, and the impression made by the newspaper accounts has indelibly impressed upon the minds of everyone the name of Washington C. H., Ohio.

Plumber Missing Since the Fire

R. A. Hillard, aged 60, a steam fitter employed by the Allen Construction Company, is mysteriously missing, not having been seen or heard of since the Saturday night fire.

Hillard has been employed by the Allen Construction company since last spring, and recently has been assisting in the work on the School building in Sabina. His absence has caused much apprehension upon the part of the company, who think it possible that he might have been trapped in one of the buildings destroyed.

The man was a veteran of the Civil War, and came here from Parkersburg, W. Va. He was a man weighing 180 pounds, 5 feet 8 inches in height, brown eyes, white mustache, was slightly stooped and wore a derby hat and dark clothes.

The work of adjusting the claims of the Masonic Temple Company was completed Wednesday night, and the total insurance of $28,000 was allowed. The total value of the entire building owned by the Company was fixed at over $51,000.

The adjusters and committee met and went over the grounds thoroughly, making the adjustment without trouble, and allowing the full amount of insurance as above mentioned. The building was considered a total loss.

It is the intention of the Masonic Temple Company to rebuild upon the same site, and definite plans will probably be adopted at an early date.

Horse Runs Away Killing Itself

Wednesday evening an unusual accident occurred on the Circleville pike, three miles east of this city, when a horse owned by Mr. Charles Brown of West Holland, ran away, crashed into a telephone pole, and killed itself.

Mr. Brown and Bluse Shipley had been to this city, bringing in a load of poultry and eggs, and were on their way home. They were driving a team hitched to a huckster wagon and the horses became frightened. After running some 200 yards they were brought to a standstill. One of them appeared to be sick, and was being unhitched when it tore loose, ran back toward this city, colliding with a telephone pole and crushing its head.

CRAIG BROTHERS.

Nation-wide Publicity Given to Washington C. H.

Every Leading Newspaper in America Contained Account of Fire, Many Greatly Exaggerating the Big Conflagration.

Every newspaper of importance in the United States contained more or less mention of the great conflagration which swept this city Saturday night, and tens of millions of people have read of the great calamity which swept down upon the city under cover of darkness, and Washington C. H. is better known in every nook and corner of the country than ever before.

In many of the newspapers outside of Ohio the account of the blaze was greatly exaggerated. In the eastern newspapers it was elaborated upon and distorted until the accounts indicated that the city had been wiped off the map.

The western papers carried an even more exaggerated account of the blaze, reporting the loss at over two millions of dollars, with the flames still spreading. Oklahoma newspapers had the loss fixed at $2,000,000.

with two or three lives sacrificed, and a half dozen big fire departments rendering assistance.

Early reports of the fire were sent out over the Postal wires, what Western Union wires were working, and the long distance telephone. The full extent of the damage could not be determined until one o'clock Monday morning, and even then it was not certain that the flames would be satisfied with the square to which it had thus far confined itself.

Washington C. H. was advertised as probably never before, but it cost the business interests of the city a cool $200,000 or better to do it, together with a like amount from the Insurance Companies. The sympathy of the reading American public, has been aroused for the stricken city, and the impression made by the newspaper accounts has indelibly impressed upon the minds of everyone the name of Washington C. H., Ohio.

Plumber Missing Since the Fire

R. A. Hillard, aged 69, a steam fitter employed by the Allen Construction Company, is mysteriously missing, not having been seen or heard of since the Saturday night fire.

Hillard has been employed by the Allen Construction company since last spring, and recently has been assisting in the work on the School building in Sabina. His absence has caused much apprehension upon the part of the company, who think it possible that he might have been trapped in one of the buildings destroyed.

The man was a veteran of the Civil War, and came here from Parkersburg, W. Va. He was a man weighing 180 pounds, 5 feet 8 inches in height, brown eyes, white mustache, was slightly stooped and wore a derby hat and dark clothes.

Masonic Temple Co. Claim Is Adjusted

Carpenter Falls Headlong Probably Fatally Injured

Turl Blackmore Still Unconscious From Dangerous Fall

While engaged in remodeling the rear of the Hess (formerly Crone) livery stable, Turl Blackmore, aged 50, carpenter, living at 350 East Gregg street, was probably fatally injured when the ladder upon which he was standing slipped, precipitating him headlong to the frozen ground, twelve feet beneath.

Mr. Blackmore struck the back of his head, causing a serious concussion of the brain, and probably a fractured skull, rendering him unconscious. The accident occurred at 10:00 o'clock Thursday morning, and several hours later he had not regained consciousness, although he was resting easy.

Immediately after he was injured he was carried into a nearby blacksmith shop and placed upon a cot. Dr. D. H. Rowe, whose office was within a stone's throw of the scene, responded to a hurried summons, and found Mr. Blackmore apparently breathing his last. Powerful stimulants were injected, bringing the rapidly weakening heart back to stronger throbs. Had it not been for this, death would have resulted within five minutes.

C. B. Hillis, a fellow workman, was in the building, working within a few feet of Mr. Blackmore. He heard the ladder slipping upon the corrugated sheet steel siding and sprang for the opening and tried to grasp the falling man, but he was an instant too late, and man and ladder crashed to the earth. The victim did not move after falling and was apparently dead.

He was carried into the blacksmith shop by Mr. Fuller Hess, and others, and Mr. Hess immediately summoned a physician and ambulance. Mr. Blackmore was later removed to his home where he now lies at the point of death.

Carpenter Falls Headlong Probably Fatally Injured

Turl Blackmore Still Unconscious From Dangerous Fall

While engaged in remodeling the rear of the Hess (formerly Crone) livery stable, Turl Blackmore, aged 50, carpenter, living at 350 East Gregg street, was probably fatally injured when the ladder upon which he was standing slipped, precipitating him headlong to the frozen ground, twelve feet beneath.

Mr. Blackmore struck the back of his head, causing a serious concussion of the brain, and probably a fractured skull, rendering him unconscious. The accident occurred at 10:00 o'clock Thursday morning, and several hours later he had not regained consciousness, although he was testing easy.

Immediately after he was injured he was carried into a nearby blacksmith shop and placed upon a cot. Dr. D. H. Rowe, whose office was within a stone's throw of the scene, responded to a hurried summons, and found Mr. Blackmore apparently breathing his last. Powerful stimulants were injected, bringing the rapidly weakening heart back to stronger throbs. Had it not been for this, death would have resulted within five minutes.

C. B. Hillis, a fellow workman, was in the building, working within a few feet of Mr. Blackmore. He heard the ladder slipping upon the corrugated sheet steel siding and sprang for the opening and tried to grasp the falling man, but he was an instant too late, and man and ladder crashed to the earth. The victim did not move after falling and was apparently dead.

He was carried into the blacksmith shop by Mr. Fuller Hess and others, and Mr. Hess immediately summoned a physician and ambulance. Mr. Blackmore was later removed to his home where he now lies at the point of death.

THE CANAL ZONE AN IDEAL HEALTH RESORT.

Again the report of the Department of Sanitation of the Isthmian Canal Commission leads one to marvel at the almost incredible result of trained, scientific effort to control disease, as well as at the dense stupidity of a people, who, with such an object-lesson before them, will not profit by it to save their own lives and those of their wives and children. Cold figures in official reports are inadequate. One must visualize the facts and clothe the myth with flesh and blood in order to realize their meaning. The report of the Department of Sanitation for October, 1911, shows that during that month there were 37,496 colored and 12,316 white employees at work on the canal and railroad. Thirty-three colored employees died of disease and six from violence, a total of thirty-nine deaths, or an average annual rate per thousand of 12.48. This is the death-rate for October for nearly thirty-eight thousand negro laborers, working in what was, a few years ago, the pest-hole of the tropics. The Journal of the American Medical Association says that the death-rate for the United States for 1910, for all classes and climates, was 16.1, nearly 4 deaths per thousand higher than the death-rate for the poorest class of laborers in the Canal Zone. Among the white employees, numbering 12,316, five died from disease and two from violence, a total annual death-rate of 6.82 per thousand. Returns from the 1910 federal census show that the American city having the lowest death-rate in 1910 was West Orange, N. J., where the death-rate was 8.5, while the highest death-rate, that of Charleston, S. C., was 29.7, or over four times the rate among white employees on the Isthmus. It is true that in any city infants and the aged, not to speak of the chronically diseased, help to swell the death-rate, whereas the employees on the Isthmus are men in the working period of life; yet this comparison only shows the progress that has been made since the Isthmus came under control of American sanitary officers. A survey of the death-rate among the white American population, including women and children, gives even more conclusive proof of this achievement. Of the seven white employees who died in October, only one was an American, a man aged 44, who died of chronic nephritis. The only other death among white American men, women and children in the Canal Zone during the month of October was that of a child, aged 15 months, who died of peritonitis. Think what this means! Nearly twelve thousand white men, women and children from the United States—11,839, to be exact, these figures including about four thousand of the white employees previously mentioned—are living happily, comfortably and safely in what was, a few years ago, a hot bed of disease—and the annual death rate among them, as indicated by the deaths for October, was 2.03 per thousand. And yet the League for Medical Freedom, headed by Senator Works, demands that the President revoke his order limiting the right to treat disease on the Isthmus to properly educated persons, and that the wonderful results secured by the toil and sacrifice of devoted, clear-headed scientific men be surrendered at the behest of deluded and uninformed religious enthusiasts.

ONE of the most important things on the subject of health is the matter of FOOD. As long as the body is in good, well nourished condition germs have little chance. It is when a man becomes rundown that he is susceptible to disease. Now, the most important element in building up strength and disease resistance is GOOD FOOD.

Often enough we find ourselves being combated by the men who should be helping us. I mean "expert testimony." I've heard reputable physicians testify in court that, because they had taken some drug ONCE and it HADN'T KILLED THEM, they considered it harmless.

My greatest wealth lies in having the confidence of the medical profession of this great country. The American physicians are our BEST CITIZENS. Why, it is the physicians who are digging the Panama canal. They made a death region A HEALTH RESORT.

Poetry—Today

RECESSIONAL.

God of our fathers, known of old—
Lord of our far-flung battle line—
Beneath whose awful hand we hold
Dominion over palm and pine—
Lord God of Hosts, be with us yet,
Lest we forget—lest we forget!

The tumult and the shouting dies,
The Captains and the Kings depart
Still stands thine ancient sacrifice—
An humble and a contrite heart
Lord God of Hosts, be with us yet,
Lest we forget—lest we forget!

Far-called, our navies melt away;
On dune and headland sinks the fire,
Lo! all our pomp of yesterday
Is one with Nineveh and Tyre!
Judge of the nations, spare us yet,
Lest we forget—lest we forget!

If, drunk with sight of power, we loose
Wild tongues that have not been tame,
Such boasting as the Gentiles use
Or lesser breeds without the law—
Lord God of Hosts, be with us yet,
Lest we forget—lest we forget!

For heathen heart that puts her trust
In reeking tube and iron shard,
All valiant dust that builds on dust,
And guarding calls not Thee to guard,
For frantic boasts and foolish word,
Thy mercy on Thy people, Lord!
Amen.
—Rudyard Kipling.

This, he declared, was not that meat shipped to the east had to be sold at a certain price, but that the whole volume of the shipment would have to turn in a certain margin of profit. The making of allotments to the shippers, he said, was in self-protection of their interests, so that none would overship the market and cause a material loss from spoiling.

ONE of the most important things on the subject of health is the matter of FOOD. As long as the body is in good, well-nourished condition germs have little chance. It is when a man becomes rundown that he is susceptible to disease. Now, the most important element in building up strength and disease resistance is GOOD FOOD.

Often enough we find ourselves being combated by the men who should be helping us. I mean "expert testimony." I've heard reputable physicians testify in court that, because they had taken some drug ONCE and it HADN'T KILLED THEM, they considered it harmless.

My greatest wealth lies in having the confidence of the medical profession of this great country. The American physicians are our BEST CITIZENS. Why, it is the physicians who are digging the Panama canal. They made a death region A HEALTH RESORT.

Poetry—Today

RECESSIONAL.

God of our fathers, known of old—
Lord of our far-flung battle line—
Beneath whose awful hand we hold
Dominion over palm and pine—
Lord God of Hosts, be with us yet,
Lest we forget—lest we forget!

The tumult and the shouting dies,
The Captains and the Kings depart
Still stands thine ancient sacrifice—
An humble and a contrite heart
Lord God of Hosts, be with us yet,
Lest we forget—lest we forget!

Far-called, our navies melt away;
On dune and headland sinks the fire,
Let all our pomp of yesterday
Be one with Nineveh and Tyre!
Judge of the nations, spare us yet,
Lest we forget—lest we forget!

If, drunk with sight of power, we loose
Wild tongues that have not thee in awe,
Such boasting as the Gentiles use
Or lesser breeds without the law—
Lord God of Hosts, be with us yet,
Lest we forget—lest we forget!

For heathen heart that puts her trust
In reeking tube and iron shard,
All valiant dust that builds on dust,
And guarding calls not Thee to guard—
For frantic boasts and foolish word,
Thy mercy on Thy people, Lord!
Amen.

—Rudyard Kipling

A HERO IN A LIGHTHOUSE.

For years J. S. Donahue, So. Haven, Mich., a civil war captain, as a lighthouse keeper, averted awful wrecks, but a queer fact is, he might have been a wreck himself, if Electric Bitters had not prevented. "They cured me of kidney trouble and chills," he writes, "after I had taken other so called cures for years, without benefit and they also improved my sight. Now, at seventy, I am feeling fine." For dyspepsia, indigestion, all stomach, liver and kidney troubles, they're without equal. Try them. Only 50 cts. at Blackmer & Tanquary.

Taft Aroused Enters Fight

It is also known that Republicans prominent in the affairs of New England who have all along been especially friendly to Mr. Taft, and who are not at all friendly to Roosevelt, feel that the situation is becoming so intolerable that eventually it may be necessary to seek for a compromise candidate, and these men invariably whisper the name of Hughes.

LANGDON WILL ORATE

Is Selected as President's Mouthpiece in Ohio Campaign.

Washington, Jan. 4.—Announcement was made here that Lawrence K. Langdon, Republican floor leader in the house during the last session of the Ohio legislature, is to take the stump in Ohio for Taft. His first speech will be delivered at Akron Jan. 9 and his second at Columbus Jan. 12. Other engagements will be made at an early date, and it is understood that Langdon is to be recognized as the accredited Taft leader in Ohio. Langdon held a long conference with President Taft. He also interviewed Assistant Attorney General Fowler at length, securing material as to the administration's trust record, which he will use in speeches throughout the state.

While at the White House, Mr. Langdon gave out a brief interview, in which he declared that the opposition to Taft in Ohio will amount to nothing in the end and that Taft will have a solid delegation from his home state in the Chicago convention.

LaFollette Speaks on Trust Problem at Chicago.

Chicago, Jan. 4.—Speaking before a crowd which overflowed the hall, Senator LaFollette opened his campaign here with a tribute to John Sherman of Ohio, father of the Sherman anti-trust law. The senator declared that Sherman was a real statesman and said that in framing the anti-trust law he foresaw the danger of the trusts a decade ahead.

Senator LaFollette outlined his policy for dealing with the trusts, and declared that their gradual effacement was desirable. To squeeze all the water from the trusts by one quick move would, he said, result in a disastrous panic.

IN THE GARB OF AN EMPRESS

So Gowned London's Most Popular Actress Becomes the Bride of a Scotch Laird.

London.—From a little Yorkshire lassie, playing barefooted and tousle-headed about the streets of the quaint English town where she was born, to be the bride of Ian Bullough, a Scotch land owner of a vast estate, and holding an honored place in the highest social circles of Great Britain—such, in brief, has been the remarkable career of Lily Elsie. Her real name is Elsie Cotton, but when, at a very youthful age, she appeared in "the provinces" as a member of a theatrical troupe she was appropriately called "Lily Elsie" she has since been known. Her rise is one of the romances of the stage.

While yet in her teens she became a favorite in London and at the time of her marriage, which took place recently, was reckoned as the most beautiful and winsome actress in all the vast English metropolis. Naturally, titles and fortunes have been laid at her dainty feet, but of them all the Yorkshire Lily choose the dignified Scotchman. For her is predicted a triumphant reign as a society queen, for even the haughtiest of aristocrats are forced to own her charm.

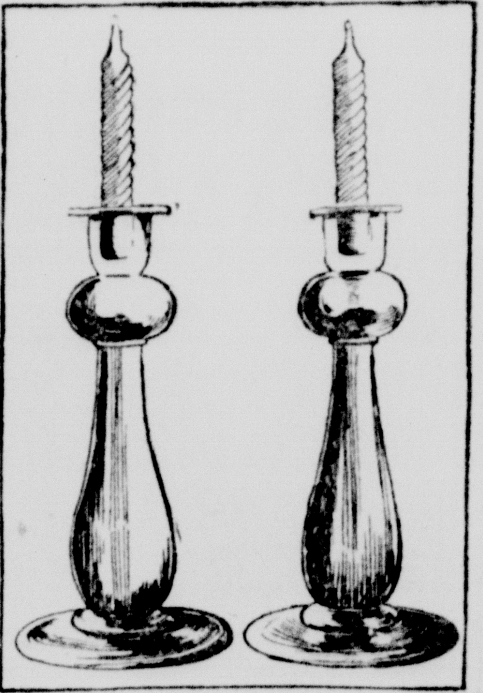

The illustration shows Lily Elsie clad in her wedding gown which was copied from one worn by the famous Empress Josephine.

"Old Put" Sandles Lauds Jud Harmon

Sandles Declares Governor Worthy of Solid Support.

Columbus, O., Jan. 4.—At a conference held in the executive chamber and participated in by Governor Harmon steps were taken to strike back vigorously at those in his party who are opposing the governor for president. Among those who participated in the conference were the governor's secretary, George S. Long, A. P. Sandles, secretary of the state board of agriculture, Beriah E. Williamson, secretary of the state tax commission, and other attaches of the administration.

It was decided to give battle to those insuring Democrats of Ohio who have just organized to prevent the governor from capturing a solid delegation from the state and to injure him politically throughout the nation.

At the close of the conference, Mr. Sandles prepared a statement, which was given out, defending the governor from the fierce onslaught directed against him by the so-called progressives in his own party, and endorsing his work as chief executive.

CHILDREN INJURED.

Ordinary Cathartics and Pills and Harsh Physic Cause Distressing Complaints.

You cannot be over-careful in the selection of medicine for children. Only the very gentlest bowel medicine should ever be given, except in emergency cases. Ordinary pills, cathartics and purgatives are apt to do more harm than good. They may cause griping, nausea and other distressing after-effects that are frequently health-destroying.

We personally recommend and guarantee Rexall Orderlies as the safest and most dependable remedy, which we know, for constipation and associate bowel disorders. We have such absolute faith in the virtues of this remedy that we sell it on our guarantee of money back in every instance where it fails to give entire satisfaction, and we urge all in need of such medicine to try it at our risk.

Rexall Orderlies are eaten just like candy, are particularly prompt and agreeable in action, may be taken at any time, day or night, do not cause diarrhoea, nausea, griping, excessive looseness, or other undesirable effects. They have a very mild but positive action upon the organs with which they come in contact, apparently acting as a regulative tonic upon the relaxed muscular coat of the bowel, thus over-coming weakness, and aiding to restore the bowels to more vigorous and healthy activity.

Rexall Orderlies commonly completely relieve constipation, except of course when of a surgical character. They also tend to overcome the necessity of constantly taking laxatives to keep the bowels in normal condition. Three sizes of packages, 10 cents, 25 cents, and 50 cents. Remember, you can obtain Rexall Remedies in Washington C. H. only at our store, The Rexall Store, Blackmer & Tanquary.

Dahl-Millikan to Erect New Five-story Building

Modern Fire-proof Structure Will Rise From the Ashes of Former Four-story Building—Work Commences at Once.

Rising from the ashes of the ruins, a gigantic monument to the never-say-die spirit of Washington business men, a new massive five-story brick, concrete and steel building will be erected by the Dahl-Millikan Wholesale Grocery Company, which suffered the loss of the large four-story office building and warehouse, together with a most valuable stock of goods, in Saturday night's never-to-be-forgotten fire.

This announcement, coming as it does so quickly upon the heels of the fire, carries assurance which places self-confidence in the smaller firms, and is pleasing news indeed to the people of Washington, Fayette county and this part of Ohio.

The new fire-proof structure will be erected just as quickly as a large force of men can do it, and the weather permitting. Without delay a gang of men will be employed to commence the work of clearing away the debris and making room for the new foundation. Within a week the site will be a scene of activity, and by the first of July, this year, the firm hopes to have the mammoth office building and warehouse completed and be occupying the same.

The cost of such a building will probably run from $50,000 to $75,000, and when completed it will represent one of the most modern fire-proof buildings in the state. The five stories and basement will contain nearly 60,000 square feet of floor space. It will be 165 by 55 feet fronting on Main street like the former building.

Plans for the new building have been ordered, and as soon as adopted, no delay will be allowed, and actual work will commence on the massive building before it seems possible.

The need of a large building has been felt by the ever-increasing business of the firm, and it was deemed advisable to erect a building which will give much more floor space than the former building, and be safe from fire dangers, within and without.

OPENED UP.

Having been burnt out in the Masonic Temple, I am now located in the Sherman block in the rooms formerly occupied by the township trustees.

Slagle Lumber and Coal Company Purchase Big Lumber Yards of Fayette County Lumber Company, Taking Charge at Once

The changes in Washington within the past few days have been many and varied, and another big one has just been consummated in the purchase of the Fayette County Lumber Company by the Slagle Lumber & Coal Company, the amount of money changing hands reported as being $50,000 to $60,000.

This transaction was closed up this week, and the Slagle Company took charge immediately. The lumber business will be conducted under the name of the Fayette County Lumber Company, with offices on South Fayette street, while the building material, such as plaster, brick, cement blocks, lime and also coal, will be under the firm name of the Slagle Lumber and Coal Company. Mr. W. C. Slagle managing the entire business. Mr. Arthur Slagle will continue to manage their business in Greenfield, while Mr. C. E. Slagle will continue to operate the business in Louisiana, where the Slagle Lumber Company has large interests.

The officers of the company will be: C. E. Slagle, president; W. C. Slagle, vice president and secretary, and Arthur Slagle, treasurer. The three brothers are by no means strangers, as they were all born near this city and have conducted a lumber yard in Greenfield for years, buying the W. A. Tysor interests a year or more ago.

Local parties interested in the Fayette County Lumber Company are: E. C. White and T. O. Gilliland, the latter having been in charge of the business since N. J. Koontz, who is also a stockholder, moved to Middletown to take charge of a big lumber yard. The company has been a branch of the Peter Koontz Lumber Company of Dayton, Ohio, but the entire property is now owned by the Slagle Bros.

T. O. Gilliland will probably go to Marion, Ohio, to take charge of a lumber yard.

Mayor Gives Orders For More Arrests

Mayor Smith has issued orders to Chief of Police McCoy to arrest Leo Anderson, colored, and "Boots" Mickel, who have returned since the new administration commenced. These men are to be taken before Mayor Smith for investigation, and all fines will be enforced.

Harry Carmichael also returned, was taken before Mayor Smith, who gave him two days to get work or get out of town. If at the end of that time he is still here and has no work, he will be arrested.

"All persons must have a clear docket," says Mayor Smith, or what is standing against them will be enforced.

Ham Taylor and Joe Tapsico, among those who returned, were taken before Mayor Smith, who says the docket is clean against them, and they will be allowed to stay on probation.

John Haggard, Mart DeWitt and Sol. Loofbourrow have been sworn in as special police for Dahl-Millikan Co., the Fayette Hardware Co., and the Masonic Temple Co. All but two of the special police, or members of Company M, were dismissed Wednesday.

The loss sustained by the lodge has been adjusted, $1200 being paid by the Niagara Company. The lodge will lose at least $2500 in the fire, the insurance being wholly inadequate.

language but Spanish will be spoken in hell for the next five years."

He got his chance soon. In the summer of 1898 Captain Evans and the battleship Iowa were a part of Rear Admiral Sampson's fleet that had bottled up Cervera in Santiago harbor. It was on July 3 that Cervera made his dash for freedom. When the signal, "enemy's ships coming out," was hoisted, the Iowa was or blockading station off the entrance of the harbor, three or four miles from Morro castle. There was steam in the boilers for five-knot speed. The Iowa headed for the Maria Teresa, Cervera's flagship, and gave the Spaniard a broadside at 2,500 yards. The Vizcaya came up next and Evans let go with all the metal of his starboard side. Then he tackled the Cristobal Colon, engaged two torpedo-boat destroyers with his secondary battery and kept hammering away at 2,500 yards or less at the Maria Teresa, the Vizcaya and the Oquenda. When the Vizcaya was run around Captain Evans sent boats to rescue her crew, and received on board the Iowa the commander and her officers as well. There were no casualties on the Iowa.

Arrangements for the funeral have been placed in the hands of the navy department. Though the details have not yet been decided, it has been settled that Admiral Evans' body shall be accorded all military honors, and the burial will take place tomorrow afternoon in Arlington national cemetery. Eight pallbearers will be selected from among officers who had served under Admiral Evans and his closest friends in naval circles.

RINGWORM.

An Easy and Very Successful Treatment.

Try this Remedy at Our Risk.

You know what ringworm looks like—starting as a little circular patch of tiny pimples, which dry up into scales and are followed by another crop on the outer edge, thus enlarging the ring all the time.

It may be caught from other children, and from dogs and cats. Tincture of iodine is the old remedy, but we have a better one now—Saxon Salve, our new skin remedy.

Apply Saxon Salve a few times (as directed by the book in the box) and the ringworm vanishes. Saxon Salve so saturates the skin with its powerful, yet soothing ingredients, that the ringworm parasites are destroyed.

Of course, Saxon Salve has many other uses. All kinds of skin eruptions and disorders, eczema, barber's itch and tetter yield to Saxon Salve. It is a wonderful remedy and we guarantee it most positively. Blackmer & Tanquary, Druggists, Washington C. H. O.

Cemetery Trustees Meet and Reorganize Pass Resolutions

At a meeting of the Cemetery Trustees Wednesday, that body organized for the coming year by electing N. S. Barnett, president; Duncan McLean, treasurer, and George Gossard, secretary and superintendent.

Resolutions of respect were adopted upon the death of W. D. Cole, who has been a member of the Board of Cemetery Trustees for 15 years. The resolutions are as follows:

Inasmuch as it has pleased Almighty God to take from us a member of our Board, in the person of Warren D. Cole, who has been our treasurer for nearly fifteen years past,

It is Resolved, That in his death we recognize our personal loss, as a personal friend as well as co-laborer in the work at the cemetery, and that we, as the Board of Cemetery Association, are not the only losers, but the lot and grave owners as well. He was congenial and in favor of every improvement within our means. He was an enthusiastic member of the Board and never missed a meeting when health would permit.

It is Resolved, That we extend to the widow and family our sincere sympathy in their great loss.

CHAPTER III.

It was October when the consultation was held in the library of the old French house on the Hudson; December was very near on the sunny morning that Emily drove out to the factory and sought Bailey in his office.

"I wanted to talk with you," she explained, as that gentleman rose to receive her. "We have known each other for a long time, Mr. Bailey; ever since I came from the Sacred Heart to live with Uncle Ethan. That is a very long time."

"It's a matter of five or six years," agreed the charmed Bailey, contemplating her with affectionate pride in her prettiness and grace. "You used to drive out here with your pony and spend many an hour looking on and asking questions. You'll excuse me, Miss Emily, but there was many a man passed the whisper that you'd have made a fine master of the works."

She shook her head, folding her small gloved hands upon the edge of the desk at the opposite sides of which they were seated.

"At least I would have tried. I am quite sure I would have tried. But I am only a girl. I came to ask you something regarding that," she lifted her candid eyes to his, her soft color rising. "Do you know—have you ever met any men who cared and understood about such factories as this? Men who could take charge of a business, the manufacturing and racing and selling, like my uncle? I have a reason for asking."

"Sure thing," said Bailey, unexpectedly prompt. "I've met one man who knows how to handle this factory better than I do, and I've been at it twelve years. And there he is—he turned in his revolving chair and rolled up the shade covering the glass-set door into the next room, 'my manager, Lestrangle.'"

The scene thus suddenly opened to the startled Emily was sufficiently matter-of-fact, yet not lacking in a certain sober animation of its own. Around a drafting table central in the bare, systematic disorder of the apartment beyond, three or four blue-shirted men were grouped, bending over a set of drawings, which Lestrangle was explaining. Explaining with a vivid interest in his task that sparkled over his clear face in a changing play of expression almost merric in its command of attention. The men watched and listened intently; they themselves no common laborers, but the intelligent workmen who were to carry out the ideas here set forth. Wherever Lestrangle had been, he was courtless and the sleeves of his outing shirt were rolled back, leaving bare the arms whose smooth symmetry revealed little of the racing driver's strength; his thick brown hair was rumpled into boyish waves and across his forehead a fine black streak wrote of recent personal encounter with things practical.

"Oh!" exclaimed Emily faintly. And after a moment, "Close the curtain, please."

None of the group in the next room had noticed the movement of the shade, absorbed in one another; any sound being muffled by the throb of adjacent machinery. Bailey obeyed the request, and leaned back in his chair.

"That's Darling Lestrangle," he stated with satisfaction. "That's his own design for an oiling system he's busy with, and it's a beauty. He's entered for every big race coming this season, starting next week in Georgia, and meantime he oversees every department in every building as it never was done before. The man for me, he is."

Emily made an unenthusiastic sign of agreement.

"I meant a very different man from Mr. Lestrangle," she replied, her dignity altogether French. "I have no doubt that he is all you say, but I was thinking of another class. I meant—well, I meant a gentleman."

"Oh, you meant a gentleman," replied Bailey, surveying her oddly. "I didn't know, you see. No; I don't know any one like that."

"Thank you. Then I will go. I—it does not matter."

She did not go, however, but remained leaning on the arm of her chair in troubled reverie, her long lashes lowered. Bailey sat as quietly, watching her and waiting.

The murmur of voices came dully through the closed door, one, lighter and clearer in tone, most frequently rising above the roar pervading the whole building. It was not possible that Emily's glimpse of Lestrangle across the glass should identify him absolutely with the man she had seen once in the flickering lights and shadows on the Long Island road; but he was not of a type easily forgotten, and she had been awakened to a doubting recognition.

Now, many little circumstances recurred to her; a strangeness in Dick's manner when the new manager was alluded to, the fact that her rescuer on that October night had been driving a racing car and had worn a racing costume; and lastly, when Bailey spoke of "Darling" Lestrangle there had flashed across her mind the mechanic's ridiculous answer to the request to aid her chauffeur in changing a tire: "I'll do it for you, Darling." And listening to that dominant voice in the next room, she slowly grew crimson before a vision of herself in the middle of a country road, appealing to a stranger for succor, like the heroine of a melodramatic fiction. cidedly she would never see Lestrangle, never let him discover Miss French.

"I will go," she reiterated, rising impetuously.

The glass-set door opened with unwelcome abruptness.

"I'll see Mr. Bailey," declared some one. "He'll know."

Helpless, Emily stood still, and straightway found herself looking directly into Lestrangle's gray eyes as he halted on the threshold.

It was Bailey who upheld the moment, all unconsciously.

"Come in," he invited heartily. "Miss French, this is our manager, Mr. Lestrangle; the man who's going to double our sales this year."

Emily moved, then straightened herself proudly, lifting her small head.

Lestrangle had recognized her, she felt; the call was to courage, not flight.

"I think I have already met Mr. Lestrangle," she said composedly. "I am pleased to meet him again."

"Met him?" cried Bailey. "Met him? Why?"

Neither heeded him. A gleaming surprise and warmth lit Lestrangle's always brilliant face.

"Thank you," he answered her. "You are more than good to recall me. Miss French. I owe an apology for breaking in this way, but I fancied Mr. Bailey alone—and he spoils me."

"It is nothing; I was about to go." She turned to give Bailey her hand, smiling involuntarily in her relief. With a glance, an inflection, Lestrangle had stripped their former meeting of its embarrassment and unconventionality, how, she neither analyzed nor cared.

"Good morning," said Bailey. "Shall I take you through, or—"

But Lestrangle was already holding open the door, with a bright unconcern as to his workmanlike costume which impressed Emily pleasantly. She wondered if Dick would have borne the situation as well, in the impossible event of his being found at work.

The two walked together down an aisle of the huge, machinery-crowded room, the grimy men lifting their heads to gaze after Emily as she passed. Once Lestrangle paused to speak to a man who sat, notebook and pencil in hand, beside another who manipulated under a grinding wheel a delicate aluminum casting.

"Pardon," he apologized to Emily, who had lingered also. "Mathews would have let that go wrong in an other moment. He," his smile glanced out, "he is not a Rupert at changing his tires, so to speak, but just a good chauffeur."

The gay and natural allusion delighted her. For the first time in her life Emily French laughed out in a genuine, mischievous sense of adventure.

"Yes? I wonder you could separate yourself from that Rupert to come here; he was a most bewildering person," she retorted.

"Separate from Rupert? Why. I would not think of racing a taxicab, as he would say, without Rupert beside me. He is here taking a post-graduate course in this type of car. In order to be up to his work when we go down to Georgia next week."

"Next week? You expect to win that race?"

"No. We are running a stock car against some heavy foreign racing machines; the chance of winning is slight. But I hope to outrun any other American car on the course, if nothing goes wrong."

She looked up.

"And if something does?" she wondered.

He shrugged his shoulders. "Pray be careful of those moving belts behind you, Miss French. If something does—there is a chance in every game worth playing."

"A chance!" her feminine nerves recoiled from the implied consequences. "But only a chance, surely. You were never in an accident, never were hurt?"

Lestrangle regarded her in surprise mingled with a dawning raillery infinitely indulgent.

"I had no accidents last season," he guardedly responded. "I've been quite lucky. At least Rupert and I play our game unhampered; there will be no broken hearts if we are picked up from under our car some day."

They had reached the door while he spoke; as he put his hand on the knob to open it, Emily saw a long zigzag scar running up the extended arm from wrist to elbow, a mute commentary on the conversation. In silence she passed out across the courtyard to where her red-wheeled cart waited. But when Lestrangle had put her in and given her the reins, she held out her hand to him with more gravity.

"I shall wish you good luck for next week," she said.

Lestrangle threw back his head, drawing a quick breath; here in the strong sunlight he showed even younger than she had thought him, young with a primitive intensity of just being alive.

"Thank you. I would like—if it were possible—to win this race."

"This one, especially?"

"Yes, because it is the next step toward a purpose I have set myself, and which I shall accomplish if I live. Not that I will halt if this step fails, no, nor for a score of such failures, but I am anxious to go on and finish."

Up to Emily's face rushed the answering color and fire to his drawn

"You live to do something? So do I, so do I! And every one else plays."

However Lestrangle would have replied, he was checked by the crash of the courtyard gate. Abruptly recalled to herself, Emily turned, to see Dick French coming toward them.

Remembering how the three had last met, the situation suggested strain. But to Emily's astonishment the young men exchanged friendly nods, although Dick flushed pink.

"Good morning, Lestrangle," he greeted. "I've just come up from the city, Emily, and there wasn't any carriage at the station, so when one of the testers told me you were here I came over to get a ride."

"I've been to see Mr. Bailey," she responded. "Get in."

As Dick climbed in beside her, she bent her head to Lestrangle; if she had regretted her impulsive confidence, again the clear sanity and calm of the gray eyes she encountered established self-content.

When they were trotting down the road toward home, in the crisp air, Emily glanced at her cousin.

"I did not know you and Mr. Lestrangle were so well acquainted," she remarked.

"I see him now and then," Dick answered uneasily. "He's too busy to want me bothering around him much. You—remembered him?"

"Yes."

He absently took the whip from its socket, decking the horse with it as he spoke.

"It was awfully square of you, Emily, not to mention that night to Uncle Ethan. It wasn't like a girl, at all. I made an idiot of myself, and you've never said anything to me about it since. I never told you where Lestrangle took me, because I didn't like to talk of the thing. I'm really awfully fond of you, cousin."

"Yes, Dickie," she said patiently.

"Well, Lestrangle rubbed it in. Oh, he didn't say much. But he carried me down to where they were practicing for a road race. Such a jolly lot of fellows, like a bunch of kids; teasing and calling jokes back and forth at one another half the night until daybreak, everything raw and chilly. Busy, and their mechanics busy, and one after another winking into his car and going off like a rocket. By the time Lestrangle went off, I was as much stirred up as anybody. When he made a record circuit at seventy-seven miles an hour average, I was shouting over the rail like a good one. And then, while he was off again, a big blue car rolled in and its driver yelled that Lestrangle had gone over on the Eastbury turn, and to send around the ambulance. It was like a nightmare; I sat down on a stone and felt sick."

"He—"

"He shook me up half an hour later, and stood laughing at me. 'Upset?' he said. 'No; we shed a tire and went off into a field, but it didn't hurt the machine, so we righted her and came in.' He was limping and bruised and scratched, but he was laughing, while a crowd of people were trying to shake hands with him and say things. 'I felt—funny; as if I wasn't much good. I never felt like that before. This is only practice,' he said, when I was about to go. 'The race tomorrow will do better. We find it more exciting than cocktails.' That was all, but I knew what he meant, all right. I've been careful ever since. He won the race next day, too."

"Dick, didn't it ever occur to you that you as well as Mr. Lestrangle might do real things?" she asked, after a moment.

He turned his round, good-humored face to her in boundless amazement.

"I? I race cars and break my neck and call it fun, like Lestrangle? You're laughing at me, Emily."

"No, no," in spite of herself the picture evoked brought her smile. "Not like that. But you might be interested in the factory. You might learn from Mr. Bailey and take charge of the business with Uncle Ethan. It would please uncle, how it would please him, if you did!"

Dick stirred unhappily.

"It would take a lot of grind," he objected. "I haven't the head for it, really. I'm not such an awfully bad lot, but I hate work. Let's not be serious, cousin. How pretty the frosty wind makes you look!"

Emily tightened the reins with a brief sigh of resignation.

"Never mind, Dickie. I—uncle will find a substitute. Things must go on somehow, I suppose, even if we do not like the way."

But the way loomed distasteful that morning as never before.

CHAPTER IV.

Mr. French and his niece were at breakfast, on the Sunday when the first account of the Georgia race reached Frenchwood.

"You will take fresh coffee," Emily was saying, the little silver pot poised in her hand, when the door burst open and Dick hurried, actually hurried, into the room.

"He's won! He's got it!" he cried, brandishing the morning newspaper. "The first time for an American car with an American driver. And how he won it! He distanced every car on the track except the two big Italian and French machines. Those he couldn't get, of course; but the Frenchman went out in the fourth hour with a broken valve. Then he was set down for second place—second place, Emily, with every other big car in the country entered. They say he drove like, like—I don't know what. A hundred and some miles an hour on the straight stretches."

"Oh," Emily faltered, setting down

the coffee-pot in her plate.

He stopped her eagerly, half turning toward Mr. French, who had put on his pince-nez to contemplate his nephew in stupefaction, not at his statement, but at his condition.

"Wait. In the last hour, the Italian car lost its chain and went over into a ditch on a back stretch, three miles from a doctor. People around picked the men out of the wreck, and Lestrangle came up to find that the driver was likely to die from a severed artery before help got there. Emily, he stopped, stopped, with victory in his hands, had the Italian lifted into the mechanic's seat, and Rupert held him in while they dashed around the course to the hospital. He got him there fifteen minutes before an ambulance could have reached him, and the man will get well. But Lestrangle had lost six minutes. He had rushed straight to the doctor's, given them the man, and gone right on, but he had lost six minutes. When people realized what he'd done, they went wild. Every one thought he'd lost the race, but they cheered him until they couldn't shout. And he kept on driving. It's all here," he waved the gaudy sheet. "The paper's full of it. He had half an hour to make up six minutes, and he did it. He came in nineteen seconds ahead of the nearest car. The crowd swarmed out on the course and fell all over him. Old Bailey's nearly crazy."

To see Dick excited would have been marvel enough to hold his auditors mute, if the story itself had not possessed a quality to stir even non-sporting blood. Emily could only sit and gaze at the headlines of the extended newspaper, her dark eyes wide and shining, her soft lips apart.

"He telegraphed to Bailey," Dick added in the pause. "Ten words: 'First across line in Georgia race. Car in fine shape. Lestrangle. That was all.'"

Mr. French deliberately passed his coffee-pot to Emily.

"You had better take your breakfast," he advised. "It is unusual to see you noticing business affairs, Dick; I might say unprecedented. I am glad if Bailey's new man is capable of his work, at least. I suppose for the rest, that he could scarce do less than take an injured person to the hospital. Why are you putting sugar in my cup, Emily?"

"I don't know," she acknowledged helplessly.

"I didn't mean to disturb any one," said Dick, sulky and resentful. "It's a big thing though for our car," Bailey says. I didn't know you'd liked Lestrangle."

Mr. French stiffened in his chair. "I have not sufficient interest in the man to dislike him," was the cold buke. "We will change the subject." To be Continued.)

"He shook me up half an hour later, and stood laughing at me. 'Upset?' he said. 'No; we shed a tire and went off into a field, but it didn't hurt the machine, so we righted her and came in.' He was limping and bruised and scratched, but he was laughing, while a crowd of people were trying to shake hands with him and say things. I felt—funny; as if I wasn't much good. I never felt like that before. This is only practice," he said, when I was about to go. 'The race tomorrow will do better. We find it more exciting than cocktails.' That was all, but I knew what he meant, all right. I've been careful ever since. He won the race next day, too."

"Dick, didn't it ever occur to you that you as well as Mr. LeStrange might do real things?" she asked, after a moment.

He turned his round, good-humored face to her in boundless amazement.

"I? I race cars and break my neck and call it fun, like LeStrange? You're laughing at me, Emily."

"No, no," in spite of herself the picture evoked brought her smile. "Not like that. But you might be interested in the factory. You might learn from Mr. Bailey and take charge of the business with Uncle Ethan. It would please uncle, how it would please him, if you did!"

Dick stirred unhappily.

"It would take a lot of grind," he objected. "I haven't the head for it, really. I'm not such an awfully bad lot, but I hate work. Let's not be serious, cousin. How pretty the frosty wind makes you look!"

Emily tightened the reins with a brief sigh of resignation.

"Never mind, Dickie. I—uncle will find a substitute. Things must go on somehow, I suppose, even if we do not like the way."

But the way loomed distasteful that morning as never before.

CHAPTER IV.

Mr. Ffrench and his niece were at breakfast, on the Sunday when the first account of the Georgia race reached Ffrenchwood.

"You will take fresh coffee," Emily was saying, the little silver pot poised in her hand, when the door burst open and Dick hurried, actually hurried, into the room.

"He's won! He's got it!" he cried, brandishing the morning newspaper. "The first time for an American car with an American driver. And how he won it! He distanced every car on the track except the two big Italian and French machines. Those he couldn't get, of course; but the Frenchman went out in the fourth hour with a broken valve. Then he was set down for second place—second place, Emily, with every other big car in the country entered. They say he drove like a—well, I don't know what. A hundred and some miles an hour on the straight stretches."

"Oh," Emily sighed, setting down
